

Notes on contributors

Isabella Clough Marinaro received her PhD in 2006 from the University of Bath for her thesis entitled 'Public Discourses and the Marginalization of Roma/Gypsies in Rome'. Her research focuses on the evolving conditions of Roma communities in Italy and the policy processes which affect them. She recently co-founded the American University of Rome's Center for Research on Racism in Italy and is organising a cycle of conferences and publications on immigration and multiculturalism. In addition to her academic work, she has written a series of articles on racism and anti-Roma discrimination in Italy for the Guardian.

Jason W. Davidson is Associate Professor of Political Science and International Affairs at the University of Mary Washington. His research interests include alliance politics, decisions to use force, and the foreign and security policies of France, Italy, the United Kingdom, and the United States. He has published articles in journals such as Security Studies, Nonproliferation Review, Modern Italy, and Contemporary Security Policy. He is also the author of the book The Origins of Revisionist and Status-quo States (New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006). Currently, he is completing a book on British, French, and Italian decisions to provide or refuse military support for the US from Vietnam to the 2003 Iraq War, which is under contract with Palgrave Macmillan.

Alessia Donà is Lecturer in Political Science at the University of Trento. Her main research interests include Italian equality policies, Europeanisation, European Union politics and policies. She has published numerous articles in Italian, and book chapters in English on equality issues. Her recent books include: Genere e politiche pubbliche (Bruno Mondadori, 2007) and Introduzione alle politiche pubbliche (Laterza, 2010). At the moment she is conducting research on the implications of the Lisbon Treaty for the European Union.

Phil Edwards lectures in Criminology at Manchester Metropolitan University. His research interests are in the area of political violence and contemporary Italian politics. He has published in Modern Italy, South European Society and Politics, as well as Political Studies Review. He is the author of 'More work! Less pay!' Rebellion and repression in Italy, 1972-77 (Manchester University Press, 2009).

Amie Kreppel is a Jean Monnet Chair (ad personam) and serves as Director of the University of Florida's Title VI funded Center for European Studies (CES) and the EU funded Jean Monnet Centre of Excellence. She is an Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science. She has received numerous grants to pursue research and programme development related to Europe and the European Union. She has written extensively on the political institutions of Europe in general and the European Union more specifically. Her publications include more than a dozen articles in a wide variety of journals and a 2002 book, The European Parliament and Supranational Party System, published by Cambridge University Press. She currently sits on the executive committees of the Conference Group on Italian Politics, the European Politics and Society section of the American Political Science Association and the European Union Studies Association.

Francesco Marangoni obtained a PhD in Political Science for a thesis in the area of comparative and European politics from the University of Siena, in 2007. He is currently a post-doctoral fellow in the faculty of Political Science of the University of Bologna at Forlì. He is affiliated with the Centre for the Analysis of Public Policy (CAPP), a research unit of the Department of Political Science at the University of Bologna. He also collaborates with the observatory on institutional change, hosted by the Centre for the Study of Political Change (CIRCaP) of the University of Siena.

Alfio Mastropaolo is Professor of Comparative Politics and Head of the Department of Political Studies at the University of Turin. He has published extensively on the crisis of Italian democracy, on populism and anti-political sentiments, local government, state theory and democratic theory. He has served as a member of the Executive Committee of the European Consortium for Political Research, and sits on the editorial boards of Teoria Politica, Rivista Italiana di Scienza Politica and Politix. Recent publications include, La mucca pazza della democrazia. Nuove destre, populismo, antipolitica (Bollati Boringhieri, Turin, 2005) and (with Luca Verzichelli) Il parlamento. Le assemblee legislative nelle democrazie contemporanee (Bari-Roma, Laterza, 2006).

Davide Vampa holds a BA in History (University of Milan) and an MA in European Studies (King's College London). In the autumn of 2009 he began an MPhil at the University of Oxford (European Politics and Society). His research interests are focused on the history of Italian and European political parties.

Alberto Vannucci is Professor of Political Science at the University of Pisa. His main research interests focus on political corruption, organised crime, decision-making processes, neo-institutionalism. His latest publications are Nero, grigio, sommerso: attori e politiche per l'emersione del lavoro irregolare (Felici 2009), Mani impunte. Vecchia e nuova corruzione in Italia (Laterza 2007, with Donatella della Porta), Lo spettro della competitività. Le radici istituzionali del declino italiano (Rubbettino 2006, with Raimondo Cubeddu), Governare l'incertezza. Scelte pubbliche e cambiamento istituzionale (Rubbettino 2004).